Dear Roger,

In different ways the intent of my Friday's letter to Schorr and my today's call to you had the same purpose, to put CBS, on different levels, in a position to protect itself if it wants not to be used by those with ulterior purposes that I think I see.

Friday and today were long and not easy days for me. My Friday's work was on what took me to New York three weeks ago but for a different principal. Friday I had to do it all by remote control when I knew the principal was sorely tempted. I could not do by phone what I could do in person.

Today I returned to writing and before I called you had written at least 10,000 words, beginning quite early.

With all these other things requiring concentration I may not have been clear to Schorr and I felt I had to be somewhat elliptical.

With you I am pretty sure I forgot what has been on my mind since about 7:02 a.m. Friday. I believe that Bud planted Prouty on Schorr.

I believe also that in the recent past he fed another story to Schorr. To a reporter that earlier one of which I'm pretty confident would have been a natural because if it turned out to be wrong nothing of which the reporter could think would or could be hurt. I see hurt otherwise.

In this I am neither saying nor suggesting that Bud serves a Department of Disinformation. I know him well enough to know what is his norm and both stories were.

I can, however, see this as the result with both. Separate from intentions.

There were very obvious flaws in Prouty's story. I sensed some of them and then reasoned others. But I did not have time to think it through because of the other (Friday) matters to which I had to attend.

Whether or not it is actionable the clear inference of the Prouty concoction is that as a CIA man Butterfield pulled the plug on Nixon. Those who cast Butterfield in a role I do not would go for this from earlier belief and the correlation with the House leak. And please notice that from the news available to me I have heard nobody conjecture who besides Butterfield might have filled such a role. If there was such a person and if he was not Butterfield he is both forgotten and protected.

When the media must make somebodies out of nobodies this kind of development is at some point a sure thing. If we are all prone to mistakes with the best of intentions non-experts are experts we ask for trouble.

Remember what I told you as soon as I heard the story 60 minutes was going for? All me knowing the material had to know was the subject. I wonder how much money CBS wasted on that sure loser. Or, conversely, how much good copy and film it could have had with much less. The wretch hired as a consultant reflects the knowledge of the field of those who pissed away all that stockholders' money.

As a consequence of this flap you may hear non-secrets that could interest me. I have watched Department of Disinformation operations with interest and a little care. If you come across anything you can let me know I'd like to know.

Best,
